A few of the major online violations are cyberbullying, recording VoIP calls without consent, sharing people's personal information, using torrenting services, and use of unofficial streaming services. Getting pirated content from illegal streaming or torrent websites not only breaks copyright laws but also strips writers of their proper reimbursement and may expose users to viruses and trouble with the law. Sharing personal information such as passwords or private photos without consent is a major violation of privacy that could lead to identity theft or psychological trauma. Although some people see trolling and cyberbullying a harmless behaviors, they are harmful to others putting them at risk of prosecution under the law for harassment. Recording VoIP communications without consent breaks wiretapping and privacy laws in a lot of places, therefore becoming a major crime with possibility of consequences with the law. Often harming individuals or society, these behaviors can break personal rights, property rights, and protections from the law so they are extremely serious.
