Media sources influence how we think about cybersecurity. Some movies for example intend to give this idea that getting into a system is so simple to do, which can change our mindset about real cyber threats. In those movies they mainly focus on the major breaches and not really giving a good understanding on ways to handle the problem, also not going into depth about vulnerabilities. But when I read liable reports and listen to effective information from cyber professionals , I get a better understanding of the technical aspects of cybersecurity, and new approaches the attackers use. This has made me search for reliable information and test false representations of information. Doing this has helped me become more familiar with online threats and how I can protect myself in a world moving more and more technologically advanced.
