3. The majority of searches I did either came back to 404 Page Not Found or were sites you had to pay for. I feel like although I got some information back, I don't know that it wasn't information I could've gotten by just googling the name. The IP information was something that was useful and was more information than I could have gotten from google. I learned a lot of previous addresses and phone numbers associated with this person. Additionally, I was able to see a lot of associates of this person. I was able to verify the name registered to their phone number. I was also able to see accounts associated to their username.

4. It seems I could use the information I collected and compared it to tidbits of information that I already knew and be able to verify. It seems like with that information, this person can be attributed with good character and their past seems to match with what they said.
