

Serious violations

Audrey Gyane

Old Dominion University

Cybersecurity and Social Science 201s

Professor Matthew Umphlet

Apr 10, 2024

Review what the author says and write a paragraph describing the five most serious violations and why you think those offenses are serious.

The first thing that was mentioned was using unofficial streaming services. For a number of reasons accessing copyrighted information through unlicensed streaming sites is a major felony. The first concern lies in the unapproved spread and usage of media that is protected by copyright, which makes up an obvious attack on the property of those who wrote what is being consumed and those who hold ownership of it. Furthermore, viewers destroy the credibility that comes with these films and essentially encourage copyrighting by encouraging these unauthorized avenues to stream. Also, because these sites run without legal control and could not focus individual protection, there may be an increased danger of running into viruses and experiencing stolen information that was put into the website and is now being used unauthorized. Violating copyright is morally wrong since it violates the rights of the people who made the films which causes a harmful society. The second one is using torrent services. This one ties into the same thing that the first one ties into.

The third one is sharing passwords, pictures and addresses with others. First of all sharing someone else's password, address, or any pictures is a big crime with major moral and legal consequences. People violate others by not protecting others personal information when they give out passwords and addresses without first getting permission to do so. These are people putting others at risk of getting their identities stolen, misconduct or bullying.

Fourth is bullying and trolling. This one is serious because it can affect who is being bullied and the person that is doing the bullying. Bullying is done in a way that others do not know it's happening, it is done behind a screen and usually under fake profiles. People do this to affect others' emotional states, cause them pain, and maybe even make someone harm themselves physically. Cyberbullying and trolling causes serious damages that affect people in their everyday lives.

The last one is fake identities online. This is a serious offense because it is morally wrong and can be legally wrong as well. It is morally wrong because you are showing people someone else's pictures and using fake information to make yourself more likable or to try to hurt people. It is legal wrong because you are using someone else's pictures and videos without permission which can cause them harm even if not intended. It is identity theft under the law.