Journal Entry #14: Five Severe Violations

After looking at the image "11 Illegal Things You Unknowingly Do Online," I've determined five that I believe are the most severe violations:

- Using copyrighted images
- Torrent services
- Unofficial streaming services
- Extracting audio from YouTube
- Collecting information about children

These five violations are the most severe, as they involve taking business or credit away from the creator. For example, using torrent services and unofficial streaming services prevents the host company or business from receiving money from the usage of their platform by allowing free downloads of their services illegally. A similar example applies to extracting audio from YouTube and collecting information. It's not yours to take; it belongs to someone else, so taking it without permission is illegal. All of these violations are illegal, as they take something that doesn't belong to them without permission, allowing them to profit off of a successful platform potentially.
