

Group Contract

Expectations

- Attend weekly meetings on Mondays at 4:00 PM ET.
- Members must give a notice at least one hour before the meeting if they cannot attend.
- If a member has an emergency, they must notify members within 24 hours after the meeting time.
- Members must be respectful to all other members.
- Each member will have their share of the project finished by at minimum two days before the phase ends. Tag the final build on Github 1 hour before submission.
- Group coordination will be done on GroupMe, with fallback on Discord.
- All members must participate in peer review for each phase of the project
- At the start of each phase, members must negotiate workload amongst themselves.
- Individuals must be making notable progress in a timely manner.
- If pinged, team members must reply in a timely manner (24 hrs on weekdays and 48 hrs on weekends)
- For the end of any phase, members must be ready to react more promptly to notifications from other members.
- Make sure to pull your weight and complete your work every week. If it is too much, say so.
- Members must give small updates for what they've added at least once a week
- If for any reason a team member withdraws from the class, that team member is responsible for turning over any work products they created. This includes source code, tests, documentation, etc. The existing team member should meet with the team and provide any guidance necessary to transfer work-in-progress to the remaining team members.
- If you write code, you must be able to justify it and name all dependencies. If you cannot explain why it is needed, then likely it isn't.

Cursor Expectations:

- Do not abuse the credits: Spencer is paying for the subscription, thus it costs real money and should be treated judiciously
- Use only Grok, Gemini, Copilot and Claude models: GPT support is being revoked by the developers, so it would be improper to use it when it may break. Chinese models are forbidden because they may incorporate backdoors or malware.

- Do not share the password with anyone outside the group except Valva. If you share it on social media or someone outside the group gets access, then we may need to bring it to Valva.
- All code must be approved by the team before pushing more than 100 lines or creating a new dependency. Endless proliferation of slop should be avoided.
