Researchers might use this information that is provided in the PrivacyRights.org website to study breaches in various ways. This information could provide useful data as to current laws affecting data protection and breaches of such data. The information could provide historical trend data that can be used to write Cybersecurty code and framework intervention to remain ahead of hacking trends. The information presented with respect to the laying of foundation for building high quality databases can be a safety layer of encryption against hackers. Overall market trends are provided in order to allow programmers and analysts to have the opportunity of remaining ahead of the curve for user data protection against hackers.