

Throughout the semester, I engaged in several oral/audio tasks that focused on interpersonal communication, including TalkAbroad exchanges and discussion board entries. Additionally, I participated in Spanish reading and writing exercises. All of these activities were designed to enhance my ability to communicate effectively in Spanish and expand my knowledge of Hispanic culture.

By engaging in TalkAbroad conversations, I enhanced my Spanish speaking proficiency by practicing with fluent speakers. Additionally, the discussion board posts provided a platform to express my ideas and opinions in Spanish through written communication with my peers. Initially, the unscripted aspect of TalkAbroad dialogues presented a challenge for me. However, I managed to conquer this obstacle by preparing in advance and engaging in attentive listening during the conversation. As for the posts on the discussion board, I encountered some difficulty when it came to articulating my thoughts effectively in Spanish. Nonetheless, through consistent practice and soliciting feedback from my instructor, I was able to make progress in this area.

My Spanish communication skills have developed thanks to these activities. I feel more confident expressing myself both orally and in writing. I came to realize the significance of active listening and being patient with my progress in language learning. To enhance my communication skills, I plan to continue practicing and seeking feedback.

Throughout the course of this term, I engaged in multiple speech-giving exercises in Spanish, such as delivering class presentations and filming videos. The ultimate goal behind these assignments was to enhance my proficiency in arranging and articulating concepts skillfully in the Spanish language.

A Hispanic artist was the subject of a class presentation I did. The focus was on Frida Kahlo's life and work, and how her personal experiences are reflected in her art. Throughout the delivery of my presentation, I encountered difficulties with articulating words and conveying my thoughts accurately. Nonetheless, through prior rehearsal and consulting with my tutor, I managed to surmount these obstacles. I demonstrated proficiency in arranging ideas coherently and presenting them lucidly, and I comprehended the significance of refining pronunciation and enriching vocabulary to communicate fluently in Spanish. For future presentations, I intend to concentrate on improving my pronunciation more deliberately while integrating more visual aids to reinforce my message.
