

Throughout the current academic term, I successfully finished diverse tasks involving presentations, blogs and articles composed in Spanish. These assignments have allowed me to enhance my skills in writing proficiently using the language. Among the written tasks I completed was a blog entry on "El Día de los Muertos," a celebrated Hispanic holiday.

I encountered difficulty in using the appropriate grammar and vocabulary to communicate effectively in Spanish during those activities. Nevertheless, I managed to overcome these hurdles by practicing more and getting feedback from my instructor. Writing was an area where I did well as I could neatly arrange my thoughts and express them distinctly. The significance of utilizing a dictionary and other tools for broadening my vocabulary and refining my grammar abilities became apparent to me. If there is another time, I would concentrate on advancing my sentence formation skills and including more intricate sentence structures to enhance my writing ability even further.
