To me the most dangerous violations that appear on the list are as follows:

1) Sharing Passwords, Addresses, or Photos of Others

2) Faking Your Identity Online

3) Using Other People's Internet Networks

4) Collecting Information about Children

5) and Illegal Searches on the Internet

I view these as the most harmful violations a person can commit online as these can harm the most amount of people. For example, by sharing sensitive information like addresses and passwords of others online it can lead to cybercriminals taking advantage of the information and using it as leverage in blackmailing or may lead to more information being stolen or exposed. Another reason why I believe these are the worst violations a person can commit online is that they instigate other crimes. For instance, if a person illegally uses another person's internet connection it can lead to them searching for illegal content like child pornography or instructions on how to commit fraud.