

Hacking and Movies

After watching the video, I can understand that the difference between TV shows and movies and actual real-life hacking is very much different. Movies and TV shows about hacking are sensational and have stereotypes of hackers as a certain type of enigma. This type of information is dangerous because it could create unrealistic expectations. This town plays the seriousness and intricate nature of cyber security and doesn't take the safety of Cyber threats seriously. The media has a responsibility of upholding and shaping public perceptions. With this idea in mind, there needs to be a more accurate trial of cyber security practices and these types of media. In conclusion, there needs to be more awareness of real-life cases of hacking portrayed in movies and TV shows so there is a clear understanding of cyber security.
