

The difficulty to gain unauthorized access into devices is so easy even a dog can do it

The meme above shows how human factors in cybersecurity can cause severe damage to frameworks, i.e. gaining access to unauthorized information. All it takes is for one “hiccup” in a system to allow outsiders into it.

The meme above shows that the most important fact to know is that you and you alone are the only ones who can protect your device, whether it's by various cybersecurity methods or even basic computer safety practices.

The meme above represents how cyberbullying amongst peers can easily be spread out “under people’s noses” with little to no attention, and that people will hide their darkest thoughts on digital devices.