One key aspect of a cybersecurity analyst's job is communication. You would need to be able to explain what is going on, what needs to be done, etc. Another aspect would be continued learning because a cybersecurity analyst is mostly an entry-level job. There are going to be things that you may have not known already, and it's normal to learn new things every day. Referring back to communication, there is also the aspect of being a team player. Just because this kind of job may seem rather independent, there are still going to be scenarios where you will have to work with other people to fix the problem given to you.
