1. The UGR is one of the oldest universities in Spain, founded in 1531. On the other hand, ODU was founded in 1930, making it significantly younger than UGR.
2. The UGR is located in the city of Granada, which is in the southern region of Spain. Granada is a popular tourist destination known for its historical landmarks. ODU is located in Norfolk, Virginia, a mid-sized city on the east coast of the United States.
3. Both universities offer various academic programs, including undergraduate and graduate degrees. However, the UGR is particularly well-known for its programs in the arts and humanities and its research in areas such as environmental science and biomedicine. ODU is known for its engineering, business, and education programs.
4. ODU has a strong athletics program. The UGR also has a sports program, which is not as well-known as ODU's.
