

The biggest thing I have learned is the use of accents. Accents can affect the word overall. Accents can change the pronunciation of the word and the definition as well. A challenge is where to place the accent. It is not always placed in the in the same syllable. Practicing and learning the rules of where to place an accent has been my best work so far.

Another obstacle is the pronunciation. Breaking down the syllabus has been helpful but can make me feel insecure once I hear myself speak. It is something that may have held me back from being comfortable to complete the conversations. The knowledge of being judge based on my speech is a big fear. Another fear is the lack of preparation. I was able to submit a talk abroad and I felt more confident in my work.

Lingolearning helped with the gaining the most cultural perspective. It allowed me to watch videos to learn more about the culture. It challenged me to prepare myself more to study more to make sure I was not repeating the assignment more than twice. It revealed that studying more than one day a week was not enough. It is a consistent task.

It can show me how I can support my community as well. I have not been able to participate in the community due to the lack of time, but it has shown me the importance of doing so.

The talk abroad assignments were a great experience to me because I got to practice talking Spanish with someone whose only language was Spanish. Also, I got to learn a lot of their Spanish culture, the experience made me feel amazing. The girl I met was from Cuba, and she told me so many great things about her country that I plan on visiting.

The only presentational speaking assignment completed was talk abroad. A challenge is the unforeseen. Much of the assignment is on the fly. Practicing will help me excel.

Hola Andrea,

Creo que todo se puede cambiar por lo bueno. Con los niños se pueden enseñar la manera de seguir una vida con paz sin diferencia.
