

Journal 1
Easton Jarboe
CYSE 201S

The NICE framework enhances the overall posturing of cybersecurity. This gives a relatively good structure to the types of jobs in the field. Using the NICE framework people are able to enhance their learning ability in a way that can translate from the educational field to the workplace. The part of cybersecurity that appeals to me the most is the ability to investigate. I have enjoyed using data forensics tools in order to uncover all sorts of malicious secrets. It does not feel like a job when I do forensic labs so overall I feel I have the most longevity in this pursuit. My least favorite would be going into a field of analysis. I feel I could only take it in small doses as the code would eventually start to blend together. This could be a tedious task in the long run. Overall I really enjoy all facets of cybersecurity and I would love any part of the field, some parts just seem more like a job to me while others seem like fun.