

Journal XV
Easton Jarboe
CYSE 201S

Social science and digital forensics go hand in hand. In order for a person to be good at understanding how a breach or a crime happened they have to get inside the mind of a criminal. Social science studies human behavior so it is necessary for digital forensics to also understand how people work through social science in order to gather evidence and eventually convict criminals. Therefore, social science and digital forensics are two intertwined disciplines that are essential for understanding the digital world and the criminal activities that can happen in it.