Out of the 11 things that people do online that are illegal there is only one that stands out to me as a serious offense. Collecting information about children seems to be gross and unethical, but this could only happen if someone has a kid on their ISP. Bullying and trolling is also bad because it could harm someone in the real world. Things like streaming illegally are not as bad because the way streaming works today is overpriced and the user never owns anything, they are just allowed to view stuff. Eventually if the user likes the brand enough they will support it pirated or not. Recording a call without consent is tricky because some states are two party consent and some are one party so this is only illegal in some areas. It gets even trickier if it is a call between the US and Canada.
