REFLECTION ESSAY #1

As the semester ends, we reflect on the hard work and perseverance that was done, especially working on the group project. In this essay, I want to inform you of some of the interesting progress my team and I had to finish the group project. We started by conducting a proposal assigned by our professor, which was about describing what the group will propose such as briefly describing who the audience is, what is the problem, along with the solution and what we've innovated. After doing so, transitioned to the next phase, which is the research paper to finalize our work. The progress into finishing such a paper for our project wasn't easy. Some of our team members stopped communicating with the rest of the fellow members and our best, active member dropped the course, leaving us. As a result, the group was down to two. However, shortly after some time, our inactive member returned, putting us back on track with progressing to the end. Furthermore, as we continued with the progress we had some ideas and a few changes. For instance, we decided that we'd change our business from a non-profit to a profit due to the circumstances of our goal. Moving on, as the deadline came close to the end, the progress went smoothly we each worked together to finalize ideas and suggestions. In the end, we've finally progressed our goal of finishing the project by agreeing upon our decision-making and publishing the success we've completed. Overall, the progress was intense but fun, we had some ups and downs but we still managed to finish!
