Our second meeting was like taking a closer look at MLA Studios. It was super interesting because we wanted to make our idea even better, like adding more fun things to a game. Each person in our team had something really cool to share, like adding special flavors to a recipe. We looked really closely at how cybersecurity education works and found little things we could make more exciting.

It felt like building a super cool project together, where each friend added something special. This meeting wasn't just about talking; it was like making a big plan for how our project will work. Each friend had great ideas about how people will see and use MLA Studios. It was like making a plan for telling everyone about our project, like spreading the word about a fantastic new game.

So, in this meeting, we took our first idea and made it even cooler. We worked together like a team of artists, making sure every part was just right. This meeting was like drawing the details on our project map, turning our idea into a real plan that we could all see and get excited about. It's like we were creating a treasure map, and everyone can't wait to see where it leads!
