

Reflective Essay #1

Amanee Garcia

My reflection essay from the start of who I was assigned with brought me several questions because once we introduced ourselves and spoke on our majors, I realized I was the only interdisciplinary major. I knew that my team members would know more about cyber security and the importance of the topic because I never once took interest or even a class that taught me about the subject. I was feeling less confident than I should because of my held knowledge.

The simple fact that Interdisciplinary studies is a well-rounded subject that focuses on leadership, I decided to explain exactly what my major was about. Everyone in my group was supportive and wanted to find ways on how my major could be incorporated on our entrepreneur endeavor.

As we are all online, we were not too happy about trying to figure out our schedules but we knew that full participation was key in order to all be on the same accord. As we spoke on schedules many of us were flexible which required evening meetings while feed our kids or midday where we had to step away from work to see ideas and come up with an innovation that made sense.

We originally started with creating a puzzle board similar to monopoly that was strictly for businesses to keep staff members up to date on cyber security and also create leaders with the knowledge by having control of making everyone self-aware in order to protect themselves from cyberattacks. One member was creating flash cards while we decided on how the board should look and who to advertise this brand too. A week had passed once we were assigned and we came up with more ideas before the proposal was due one was to have an app similar to a dating app but cyber awareness with hints and help futures or to create an app like facebook market that was strictly for students to use when graduating from college and leaving behind items they no longer needed.
