

Presentation Writing

As mentioned in another response, I completed many discussion boards over the semester. Doing these discussion boards, allowed me to communicate and respond to other classmates' answers as well. Many of the discussions were about videos, but some were more open-ended, which I enjoyed more. The most recent discussion board that I completed was asking about our favorite person. Having assignments that we can personalize and connect to make it more interesting and not feel so much like a task.

The first few discussion boards were a little nerve-wracking due to the fact that the whole class was able to see our responses. The main reason this was stressful for me was that I was worried I would have done the assignment wrong or had an unusual opinion or response. After realizing that the whole class was all going through the same thing, and the first few went fine, I became more comfortable and confident with these assignments.
