

Engaging in Communities

There is nothing more important than engaging in your community, and helping others when they need it. One quote that I often go back to, after hearing it when I was a child is, "Treat others the way you want to be treated". This is a quote that I live by, and I try my best to treat everyone with respect because that is the way I would like to be treated.

Two summers ago I worked in an Assisted Living home, and I am currently in the process of finding a job to do in home health care. This is a very rewarding job, that gives back to elders, and helps patients on their worst days. While some days I didn't feel like going to work, I was always excited to see the patients that I took care of. This is one of many ways that you can give back to the community and is something that I really enjoy doing. I enjoy helping others so much, that I hope to do it for the rest of my life by becoming a nurse. Personally, when helping others, I do not feel as if I am working, I feel more like a friend and companion, and that is why I love it so much.
