

Interpretative Reading

When doing discussion boards throughout the semester, we were often directed toward websites or videos to answer prompts about. Often the websites were in English, however, the videos were in Spanish. When reading the websites, I was able to understand them, because they were in English, however, I do wish some were in Spanish so I would be able to further my reading comprehension. With that being said though, after reading the articles, I then had to answer some questions in Spanish, which was the most difficult for me. Instead of getting stressed out about it, I just reviewed my notes and looked at other sources if I needed to. I found these discussions to be interesting because they allowed me to engage with my peers while learning the Spanish language. I have definitely bettered myself by completing these assignments because I learned to take the pressure off that I felt from them.
