

What I have noticed in the Spanish culture that are so outgoing and hands on when meeting people because they give each other kisses on the cheeks when they first meet, or they might hug each other. During this course I have learned that they are proud of their culture hence why they take soccer so seriously.

I have learned this semester that the Hispanic people are very friendly and loving people with their very personal greetings. When comparing to Americans we are not so personal and touchy with people that we are meeting for the first time. At first I did not know how open Hispanics were with each other, but now after watching how they greet and talk to each other I can see that they are very open. Also, that Hispanics have very close and big families. They also love the sport soccer and take so much pride in it. They watch the games anywhere they can even in the streets! When comparing to Americans the only thing that is close to Hispanics and soccer is Americans and football.
