

When you finally hack the school's system to change your grades.
These guys seem excited about something.

me and my best friend pretending to know what we are doing in a cyber security job
These two men are probably facing some challenges regarding a security breach.

Typing 'password' as a password during the audit.

This woman is probably anxious cause she is probably hacking into a government system.

The meme highlights the importance of human roles in cybersecurity, emphasizing that while professionals focus on system integrity, regular employees can inadvertently compromise security due to a lack of awareness, such as falling for phishing scams. It illustrates the value of personal cybersecurity practices, like using a password manager, in enhancing overall protection. A human-centered cybersecurity approach should prioritize education and awareness to mitigate human error, often a key vulnerability.
