

My first talk abroad experience fluctuated. I was very nervous before the call started, and I didn't know what to expect when the call did begin. I chose David Espinoza as my partner because he is also 22 years old and he lived in the capital of Nicaragua so I figured he would have a lot of interesting things to talk about. He plays the guitar and is in a band in his church which I thought was very interesting. David also sings and I love to see too so I thought that we have a lot in common and the conversation would flow easily. The conversation was a little difficult to get started and flowing at first because we were both confused on which part was ours. However, after my nerves calmed down the conversation just started flowing effortlessly. He helped me when I would get stuck and forget which word to say and he was very patient with me. When it felt like we started getting everything right the conversation was over. Thirty minutes goes by faster. The only thing I did not like about this talk abroad was that we had to share our recordings with a classmate and share our responses.
