

Hans Peterson

CYSE 201S

3/19/2024

Journal Entry 14: Mistake of Laws

Objective: Describe five of the most serious violations and why those offense are the most serious.

For me, the most serious violation off the top of the list was cyberbullying/trolling because someone could be bullied/insulted to the point of self-harm. Sharing someone's personal information, such as passwords, home address, is the second most serious violation; this could make the victim paranoid or lead to physical crime. The third most serious violation is faking one's identity, as this could be used to manipulate and coerce victims. The fourth most serious violation is using someone else's Internet network since the offender does not even pay for the network. The fifth most serious violation is searching up illegal terms because they could easily lead to police investigating you.