As a cybersecurity analyst you're supposed to understand the infrastructure of the company, being able to monitor and detect flaws inside the system that could be a threat in the future. When it comes to social behaviors you need to be able to communicate with the company you are working for to express the state of which the company is in. Having frequent meetings with the company allows for changes to happen quicker and for less mistakes that may cost the company millions of dollars.

•Complete the Social Media Disorder scale. How did you score? What do you think about the items in the scale? Why do you think that different patterns are found across the world?

I resulted with a 0 as I personally don't like messing with social media besides maybe when something big happens in the world. I don't really have any attachment to any social media, it's a cool thing to have, as it keeps me in the loop of everything going on around you but honestly I feel like it can bring a lot of unneeded stress. I find if people suffer from things like depression their response will be the complete opposite as they are going to rely on these platforms for communication.
