I think that I would like to focus my career on having agility and adapting to changes in the technology and people. The job of gathering data continues to increase in demand by government organizations, private corporations, and large businesses too. The increase of need of data gathering stems from the enormous amount of activity on the internet that can analyzed and used to improve business performance and success. Areas of my career that involve data would most likely be the areas of my career that I think would appeal to me the most. Data gathering impacts millions of people every day, and I think that is why it appeals to me. I think modularity doesn't appeal much to me because of it focuses on communication of different workforces which is different from my career plans.
