Homework Section 3 – Reflection

The homework in section three proved to be somewhat useful in the performance of the exam. In reviewing the sections that were required to be completed for this exam, there wasn't necessarily a direct correlation between the homework and the problems found on the exam. This included all the available problems within each of the chapters, so referencing a specific point within the text for clarification proved to be extremely difficult. While not every instance of what engineers do in the field is something straight out of a textbook, the sheer amount of data, information, procedures, and governing policies provide more than enough insight to cover any gaps there would be for any of the day-to-day issues. With that, the homework did prove useful in that it will be a great reference point to come back to for future work.
