In Nicole Enesse's video, the cybersecurity analyst role is portrayed as a blend of technical prowess and some critical social interaction. The analysts are communicating which security risks and solutions are diverse while also waiting for their technical teams to highlight the importance of clear persuasive communication. In this field teamwork and collaboration are essential and analysts often work together within teams across multiple departments to address and terminate threats. This video highlights how we need to understand user behaviors by detecting anomalies while also preventing engineering attacks. Companies need to educate and influence employees behavior by showcasing the responsibilities inherent in protecting any organizations data.
