While I was reading through the articles the one that stood out the most to me was about money. The article talks about cybercriminals' financial gains and spending and I thought that was very interesting. After that I would rank every other article as Political being #2 because the evidence is always strong then, revenge #3, multiple reason #4 because it talks about the complex nature of hackers. Recognition #5 But talking about the registers account of election targeting I just now find that very interesting. Boredom #6 because they discussed cyberbullying but I do not find that topic very pressing because there are multiple ways to ignore it. Finally I think entertainment is last because when they talk about linkedin that is used for jobs and connecting I do not find that fun or think it's necessarily focused.
