The NICE Framework is known as the Workforce Framework for Cybersecurity and it is a national resource to help employers spread their cybersecurity workforce. After reviewing the NICE Framework, in my future career I would be interested in focusing on Investigate and Analyze. I was looking into pursuing digital forensics and cybercrime investigation. I feel like this investigation category is the best for me because I love to analyze and try to solve criminal matters. It fascinates me to look into why criminals do what they do, and forensics end up doing criminal investigations. The category I would least like is Operate and Maintain, which provides the "support, administration, and maintenance to ensure an effective information technology system and performance and security", it's just not something that interests me into thinking I would want to do this for a long period of my life. The one category that I have the most interest in is investigating because I love to investigate and analyze many things in order to help find the evidence for the crime.
