Researchers could use the information on the website to study breaches in different ways. They can read the articles and learn about different breaches. Every article has a different topic. For example, if a student wanted to learn more about "spam" or data breakers" they could just go on the website and click whatever article they want and learn more about it. If researchers wanted to get information on what people think about the type of breach, they could look at the surveys provided on the website. I personally wouldn't use this website if I were researching breaches. Other than the surveys I don't think there's enough information to conduct enough research.