

Week 8 – Journal Entry 8

How I think movies effects people's understanding of social media is mainly making it seem much easier than it is. One unrealistic example is if a computer is being tracked it will alert the user by having a big flashing red alert on their screen alerting them to what is happening.

Sometimes movies display habits of what people shouldn't be doing. Putting passwords on a piece of paper or a sticky note and having it lay around in the same room as your computer can lead to another person easy access to their device. This common trope could

On the contrary, things that people shouldn't be doing but seems normal in movies is plugging in a random device and USB drives into their main computer. This can be dangerous especially because you don't know what kind of malware is on there if there is any. It is important to be safe and not plug it in to anything and give it to the professionals
