

I feel as if Ann's behavior is related to cybersecurity because it's a lot of people who have been in that situation to be manipulated by random strangers. Also, many hackers know when a person is on unsecure Wi-Fi network. Next a hacker will try to crack someone's password by using common passwords so that's why people need to install blockers such as firewall. Even make sure you don't use any personal information in your password. Overall, people need to just be careful when opening random e-mail links and avoid putting your personal information into websites because you never know who may be on the other side of the computer.
