My experience with talk abroad this semester was a lot better than the first semester. I was better prepared. I was a lot more comfortable even though I was still quite nervous. My original partner had to cancel due to circumstances, so I was worried about my new partner. I had a lot more commodity with my first partner; however, I enjoyed Madame Mouaddeb. She was so kind and patient with me. At first, I was scared because she was a lot older than me, so I thought she wouldn't be patient, but she was. She didn't grow an attitude or anything, and when I was stuck, she would show me a picture to help me. We talked about food, and she talked about a recipe that looked/sounded good. I wish I were able to ask her more questions.
