Bonjour Madame Facer, for this week, for my form, I decided to write on the impact Covid has had in France; mainly, I found an article that talks about how COVID-19 has had a long-term effect on French society, starting with the language. This article/video talks about how the "coronavirus" has brought about new words and terms. Stating that Covid is actually a feminine word. They use the word la coronavirus. I also was curious about how French people have dealt with changes in their greetings. In French culture, people kiss each other's cheeks when greeting. When I was researching how people reacted to no longer doing it, many found it hard because it became a habitual thing, an adopted part of their culture. I find it really sad as it's been a part of their culture for years and to have to stop abruptly would be confusing, frustrating.

https://www.france24.com/en/france/20200605-french-connections-la-covid-19-how-coronavirus-has-affected-the-french-language