

Journal 3

The website <https://privacyrights.org/> gives you detailed explanations and alerts about data breaches. Not only does it give you information about data breaches that have happened, but it also educates you about the laws and legislation regarding data breaches, keeping the consumer updated. This website gives researchers a large amount of data to collect and study. This allows them to find patterns in data breaches and figure out what vulnerabilities were in each company's systems. Finding patterns within each breach could give researchers insight into what they should implement in their systems and how companies should train their employees. Which would help companies in the future stay more secure.