

Katina Jeffries Parallel Plan.

If I am not admitted into nursing, then I will pursue psychology. Before considering nursing, I wanted to become a psychiatric aide or child therapist. Both career paths tie back to psychology. Psychology is the science of behavior and mental processes. Psychology interests me because it helps people to understand why people act the way they do. I took AP Psychology in high school, and I really enjoyed it. I like psychology because not only does it help me learn more about others but learn more about myself as well. Some interesting facts about this major would be that psychology provides insight to human behavior that you can use to your advantage. Human behavior plays a big role in the success of individuals and humans. Using this to your advantage would be to take a step back and understand someone else's perspective and what make them act the way they do. You can use this to your advantage by not getting so worked up over negative interactions with certain individuals. Instead feeling for them and helping them the best you can.

One career I can pursue with a m bachelor's degree in psychology is a mental health counselor. Mental health counselling focuses on helping people with issues that are getting in the way of their everyday life. It is helping people feel better about themselves and to be content in their life. As a mental health counselor, you can work in places like hospitals or community agencies. Mental health counseling helps with human development and growth.
