I chose this particular one because TikTok reminded me of when I first started learning about cells and biology in general. I remember in fifth grade, we made Animal and Plant cells out of candy, and we learned a song about the different types. This is where I realized that I was interested in science and, more specifically, biology. Fast forward to high school, I took my AP biology exam online. I remember it being a running joke about saying they only went into the exam knowing the mitochondria are the powerhouse of the cell. This resonates with me now in college, and cell Biology can feel it is extremely compliant. And the only thing I can remember is that the mitochondria are the powerhouse of the cell. TikTok was funny because, moving on to higher classes, everything is not so simple and cute that I can't always put it into a song.
