The Area I would like to focus my career in is investigation. I would like to monitor and try to help solve cybercrime. I have always wanted to help serve and protect other people. I will be the first boy with my last name to not serve in a combat military occupation. Every male on my fathers side has served in combat ranging from calvary in the boxer rebellion to infantry marine in Iraq. I was raised to do the same, but I feel my best use is in protecting this country from the newest threat we have, cyber threats. I feel that this threat will become the main threat to our nation in the next couple of years, and I would like to be on the frontlines of protecting our everyday citizens from cyber attacks, I feel that monitoring and investigating enemy cyber movement is what I would enjoy the most while also getting the satisfaction of knowing that I am helping bring justice to people, who normally wouldn't get it in the cyber world. The area I would least likely focus on is Operation and Maintenance. I am someone who gets bored very easily and I am not a fan of repetition. I like investigating because it will involve critical thinking and keep me on my toes, while operation and maintenance would bore me to death.
