

1 Gender-Based Cyber Violence in Indonesia:

Mohammed Aljuboer

02/10/2024

CYSE 2018

Introduction:

Hesti Armiwulan's important article, "Gender-Based Cyber Violence: A Challenge to Gender Equality in Indonesia," delves deeply into the complex dynamics of cyber violence's impact on gender equality. Armiwulan's study, which is set in Indonesia's developing cyber world, delves at the complex interplay between technology, discrimination, and societal norms. The paper uses qualitative methods such as perceptive observations and extensive literature reviews to shed light on both the online and offline manifestations of gender-based cyber violence, emphasizing its severity and highlighting the shortcomings of current legislation.

Body:

Armiwulan analyzes the full spectrum of gender-based cyber violence, highlighting offline manifestations and underscoring the gravity of this kind of discrimination. The study uses qualitative approaches, such as observations, surveys, and literature studies, to assess the prevalence of gender-based cyber violence in Indonesian society.

The article shows the inadequacy of existing policies to prevent online gender-based violence and emphasizes the necessity for real actions. Notably, the survey found a significant increase in such events, providing a challenge to Indonesia's efforts to achieve gender equality.

Armiwulan effectively links gender-based cyber violence to social science ideas, delving into the complex relationships between technology, discrimination, and society norms.

The article provides light on the issues that women confront in Indonesia, highlighting the disproportionate impact of cyber violence on underprivileged populations. It provides a compelling case for the immediate development of strategies to counteract these trends.

Conclusion:

Finally, Armiwulan's work serves as a clear call to action, asking academia, government, and society to confront and address the prevalent issue of gender-based cyber abuse. The substantial findings and sophisticated analysis set the framework for a thorough knowledge of the difficulties, underlining the crucial importance of proactive policy actions. Armiwulan's work is a crucial contribution, advancing the conversation toward developing a digital world that promotes gender equality, social justice, and inclusivity.

References:

Armiwulan, H. (2021). Gender-Based Cyber Violence: A Challenge to Gender Equality in Indonesia. View of gender-based Cyber Violence: A Challenge to gender equality in Indonesia.
<https://cybercrimejournal.com/manuscript/index.php/cybercrimejournal/article/view/12/3>