

The festival of San Fermín was the most interesting as it is well known as the running of the bulls around the world. It takes place July 6th to July 13th. I usually find parades in festivals quite boring but running for your lives trying not to get run over by bulls would definitely not be boring. I can't imagine anything like that to start being a tradition in the United States since animal rights groups would be all over that and insurance companies probably wouldn't want people in such obvious danger. It is definitely a very striking festival though. Mi fiesta favorita es el festival de Neptune. I enjoy going down to the beach and seeing the sandcastles people have made as they have a competition every year and it's amazing what they can make. It looks like it's taking place September 30th this year.
