

I created this meme because, in today's world, we are always trying to figure out the different types of hacking patterns that hackers use so that we can read and analyze their next steps.

I did this for multiple reasons because peer networking can cause a lot of problems. People who peer network are more likely to get viruses or issues that occur with their peers, or if the peer engages in any sort of harassment or bullying online, chances are you might do it as well.

Colleges in today's world collect a lot of data ranging from the students to the faculty. This information is very sensitive, and if breached, it can reveal a lot of information about everyone.