Madison, the team lead, had as her primary role the task to establish a strong communication system between us and Mr. John Beahm, the Chief Financial Officer (CFO), and Mr. Frank Rose, the General Manager of CM Technology Inc.

Carla, the design lead, had as her primary role the task of working on the visual aspects of the project and making sure that the final product presented to the company was as accurate, pleasing to the eye, and as easily understandable as possible.

Joshua, the research lead, had as his primary role, the research part, such as conducting background research about the company and understanding their business to ensure the validity of our work.

Despite having distinguished roles, each one of us took part in every single aspect of the process. As a matter of fact, we all interchanged roles and helped one another throughout the entire project. For this reason, we all feel extremely prepared to present our final work and have a clear view of CM Technology Inc.
