

Module 4 Exploración Cultural Investigar:

I compared the website of Old Dominion University with the website of the Universidad de Buenos Aires. At first glance, the websites are both fairly modern and easy to use. They both provide information about applying to the schools. The websites also include details about the degree options, the address of the universities, and the best way to contact different people at the university. Some key differences include that the UBA website is in Spanish while the ODU website is in English. The UBA website also heavily advertises information about international students while ODU does not provide as much information about applying from another country.
