

This is the continent of Paomora, the only known landmass on Planet Prasinus where aircraft can land due to the rest of the planet's surface being covered by a thick layer of clouds.

It is home to Neo Manhattan, the latest colony established by humanity as part of the Interplanetary Colonization initiative.

It's regions include the grassy meadows of Viridis, The glowing forest of Noxia, the dusty wastelands of Yevesh, the sandy shores of Sylvala, and the hellish volcanoes of Gehenna.

(paper plate due to budget restrictions)

Clurians

- Clurians have a very simple appearance that the humans describe as elvish, with pointed ears and enlarged eyes. They are commonly thinner and smaller than humans but have a greater understanding of Technomancy as the advanced technology was created by the Clurians
- Hailing from the Clu system, they are among the ranks of the Intergalactic Federation of Intelligent Life, and they do not participate in wars as a peaceful people.
- Many Clurians live among humans in their many colonies across the stars as overseers of technological advancement and encouragement of peace.
- Clurians have a mutually beneficial relationship with Humans where they provide humans with technology and resources so that humans may employ their superior survival skills and environmental adaptability to establish colonies.

Dzor

- The Dzor are stout and strong, with dark yellow skin and solid-black eyes. They have short tentacle-like appendages that look like hair on their heads and faces that are used to detect changes in air pressure giving them exceptional reflexes.
- They hail from Planet Xygol, a Desert planet where they live below the surface in extraordinary tunnel systems that run throughout the entire crust of the planet making it nearly hollow.
- The Dzor are passionate miners and are excellent craftsmen, and they often work with Clurian engineers to create machines.
- While they have extraordinary strength and dexterity, they have limited endurance and require more than double the daily food intake of Humans or Clurians.

Betelgeusians

- Betelgeusians are bipedal cat-like creatures no taller than 4ft with long bodies and stubby legs. They have both regular whiskers and larger whisker-like appendages that sprout from where their head and neck connect which give. Their eyes have yellowish scleras and black pupils.
- They hail from a moon of planet Betelgeuse with a name that only they are capable of pronouncing, similar to the name they give themselves. So to make it easier for everyone else they took on the name Betelgeusian.
- Given their unique vocal chord structure and language, universal translators struggle with them making certain words in their native language sound like meows.
- Their homeworld is very similar to earth, but as Betelgeusians are simple and easygoing their entire civilization is very rural. Their extraordinary sense of smell gives them the best culinary skills in the known universe. They are also very big on hats/headwear and most Betelgeusians have worn the same hat their entire lives.
- While they are generally satisfied with the simple living their home provides there have been many that have ventured out to the stars in search of something more, and many find themselves in the federation colonies working as chefs or scouts in expedition squads.
- They have excellent perception, reflexes, and agility but it is in short bursts similar to Earth cats.