

I learned about hospice nursing from Nurse Kim. She is a hospice nurse and case manager at Gentiva Hospice. She is an LPN (Licensed Practical Nurse). She was inspired to be in this field of work when she suffered an unexpected loss and ever since she's had the passion to help others. She works with 12 patients at the moment, and she is the gap between social workers and the caplin for her patients. She also serves as an advocate for the patient and assesses and manages the patient through their symptoms. Her goal is comfort and safety for all of her patients. Some advice she would give to people entering the healthcare field is to ask for help when you need it and to speak up for yourself. I've learned that there really are so many different positions you could hold as a nurse and the separate titles that can go along with just being a nurse.

(She didn't want her picture uploaded, but you can see her in the video recording.)
